Children's Clothes Ruled by Good Taste.

SIMPLICITY IS A FAD NOW

Frocks of Little Girls Are Dainty Yet Practical.

Excessive Elaboration Less and Less Desirable-Ready Made Clothing for Children Assumes More and More Importance-The Yoke and the Design of the Hand Embroidery the Novelty -Much Valenciennes Lace Used-The First Short Freeks and Coats-Russian Styles for Older Girls-A Great Variety of Materials From Which to Choose

Beady made garments for children assume more importance and acquire greater popularity each season, a fact that argues improvement in the clothes rather than laziness or indifference on the part of the mothers.

SUSPENDER DEESS OF PLAIR MADRAS.

As a rule the children's clothes offered in first class shops have more style and originality than the average home made garments, and if one can afford to pay a fair price the quality of the materials will be satisfactory. On the other hand there's no denying that when a mother is olever with her needle and has good taste she may, if she will give her time and work, dress her little folk daintily and smartly for less money than she would spend upon ready made garments to achieve the same

This is especially true of clothing for small girls. In the case of a boy, after the first two or three years, it is folly to dress him in home made things, unless every cent is of vital importance, for the shop made garments for boys are most satisfactory and not necessarily expensive. Hand work, lace, frills and furbelows play no part in the boy's attire after he leaves babyhood, and those are the things that make girls' clothing expensive when the work is not done at home

Luckily, excessive elaboration is less and less desirable in the little girls' frocks and coats. Simplicity has become more or less of a fad in children's dress and is the keynote of baby and small girl fashions, though sometimes this simplicity is far more expensive than the old time elaboration, and, for once in a way, faddishness is one with the eternal fitness of things.

Not within the memory of the oldest inhabitant have children been dressed so entirely in accordance with the laws of good taste as now. There is no enforced picturesqueness, disastrous to children not constructed upon picturesque lines, there is no extravagant fussiness, there is ne incongruous copying of the modes of older folk. Children's clothes are childish, dainty, simple, practical and not neces sarily expensive. What more could fastidi ous mothers desire?

In baby's long frocks and cloaks and undergarments there is little change or novelty this year, the only chance for

WHITE FIQUE DRESS, EMBROIDERED BERTHA. originality being in the fashioning of the little yokes and in the designs of the hand embroidery, which is the striking feature of the loveliest of these long dresses. This embroidery is of the finest and most delicate description — dainty little tendrils, sprigs, single blossoms, garlands, wreaths, &c.-and is eminently babyish, despite the labor and artistic skill it implies. Naturally, such embroidery belongs only to the costly little garments, and often even upon these there is only a little of the embroidery ornamenting the tiny yoke. Other models show little embroidered sprigs set at intervals down each side of the long front, or a vine or garland design following these same lines and, perhaps, furning to run around the skirt some that a few dollars more or less cuts little figure in the cost, real valenciennes is always used. As a matter of fact, many mothers, even when their incomes are not large, will use no valenciennes save the real upon baby frocks, preferring a mere edge of real lace at throat and wrists to

This is, however, an expensive hobby, though an alluring one, and though coarse imitation lace is a lamentable thing on a baby frock, there are now many imita tions of valencionnes really beautiful and hardly distinguishable from the real lace,

The floral hand embroidery is, of course ut of the reach of many, and not desirable for the common frocks of even those babies whose methers could afford to have it, but herring bone or feather stitching is sential on the long gown of the daintiest sort, and all lace used must be applied or put together by hand. The small yo kes may be made entirely of fine hand tucks with or without lines of herring bone between groups of the tucks, and with a frill of narrow valenciennes around the neck. Another such frill may border the yoke effects are certainly more practical, both because of their babyish simplicity and because they do not muss as the berthas did. Pretty narrow beading or veining is used to join lace, or lace and material.

but little Swiss embroidery is used and the quantities of such embroideries and of laces once seen in a taby's layette would be

Even the small yoke is not a necessity in the simpler gowns of the layette. The gown of softest batiste, lawn or nainsook

DRESS OF PINK CHAMBBAY.

may fall straight from the neck, with no trimming save a little frill of valenciennes above a line of narrow valenciennes insertion, by way of collar, and a similar finish at the wrists, or fine hand tucks may be run down from the neck to form a yoke

Hand made gowns of such kinds may be bought ready made at prices very reasonable, but the woman who can sew and can afford the time can make them for a song that her baby is dressed as correctly as if it were heir to millions. Only coarse materials and machine work place a baby's

The first short frocks differ little from the long ones, save in length, and all that has been said of long gowns may be applied to them as well. The frocks fall straight from yokes or neckbands, preferably the former, and shand tucking, shirring, smooking, embroidery, herring-gown outside the pale.

and yet have the satisfaction of knowing utterly out of place now.

frocks are plaint hemmed, or possibly trimmed by a group of tucks, a line of inset nsertion or feather stitching, or a design in hand embroidery running around above the hem.

White is the accepted thing for these first short frocks, as for the long ones, but many mothers find it necessary to economize by putting colored frocks upon even the tiny tots, after their helpless long clothes days are over, and little short frocks in fine pink or blue gingham or chambray with feather stitching in white and lace at neck and wrists are sometimes exceedingly dainty and pretty. Jumpers are put upon very small children now, too, and are sensible things for small girls as well as boys at any time after the child begins to walk.

Coats for infants and for short frock

THE SMALL GIRLS' COATS OF SILK, LINEN AND CLOTH, WITH THEIR TRIMMINGS OF LACE AND EM-BROIDERY.

there are charming variations upon the lingerie coats and the rage for broderic

Anglaise-the popular openwork or eyelet embroidery-finds expression in many of these lingerie coats. China silk in white or pale tint is used to line most of these lingerie coats, but even that does not make them desirable for wee babies, and for these there are the usual coats of corded or p'ain silk, cloth, cashmere nun's veiling and other

The little girl who has laid aside her first short frocks has more variety in dress.

although here, too, detail has more to do with the variety than has general design.

The waist and skirt frock, and the one piece frock of Russian persuasion are the two general divisions, and Mother Hubbard frocks are not altogether left behind with

The Russian suit has fairly stormed childdom; and though not so ubiquitous in the girl's wardrobe as in that of the little boy, it is sure to be well represented there and has much to recommend it. In linen pique, gingham, madras, percale and other firm goods it is a model both chic and practical, easily made, easily laundered, requir-

LAWN DRESS WITH INSERTION AND BEADING.

The original Russian suit closed down the side front and had straight neckband and waistband, but this idea has been modithe one-piece idea and the belt being always plait in the middle front and side plaits on each side, or three box plaits, one in the bore, feather stitching, &c., are the ap- | middle and one on each side, or it may be fied in many ways, only the general outline ing little material and little trimming.

light weight wools.

the first short frocks.

merely pulled in front with the opening ally into a chapter upon boys' clothing, and what is said of the boy's Russian suit usually accompany the boy's Russian tunic, showing very slightly below it.

Still knickers are not inevitable with the very little boy's Russian smock, and, on the other hand, many mothers put knickers on their wee girls under their Russian frocks, though they are not supposed to show unless, in the course of play, small feminine heels are lifted higher than tradition prescribes.

The blouse and skirt frocks for the very little girl are usually of the one piece order, though unlike the Russian frecks they are much the delicate embroideries described and a band of trimming down the left side; in connection with the baby's long frock but a discussion of all this falls more naturate has the bolder blind embroideries and the in connection with the baby's long frock all conquering eyelet embroidery.

000

The fine garland, spray and sprig embroidwill apply to that of the girl, with the exception of the full knickerbockers which the little girl's dressy frock of sheer white stuff, lace trimmed. Many dressy little summer frocks are slightly low in the neck and have short puff sleeves.

The bertha which in connection with a guimpe appears upon some of the pretties! little models is made not only in the embroidered form, but may be of the material inset and edged with Valenciennes or Swiss embroidery, or of the material trimmed with a contrasting band, the band being ometimes heavily stitched or embroidered in little dots. Pretty berthas are also made by setting rows of narrow Valenciennes not cut in one piece, but are made in two edging together, each row fulled slightly guimpes or worn with a white collar of the Eton sort. Mohairs, serges, light weight check and invisible plaid suitings, and regulation plaids and checks in light weight wool, cashmere, Panama, voile, broade othall these and many more are utilized for the wool spring frocks of the small schoolgirls; and stitching, contrasting bands, embroidered galloons, soutache braid, fibre braid and tiny buttons are the trimmings are yet dark enough to be serviceable. They are usually made up with white most often seen upon these frocks. & Soutache is especially popular and trims collars, yokes, berthas, belts, wristbands, skirt bands, &c. Cotton soutache, too, is much in evidence on tub frocks. Contrasting pipings, bias bands of plaid or check and the tiniest of little plaited silk frills are other trimmings for the small girl's wool frock; but the schoolgirl needs a fashion page of her own, and this week her younger sister occupies the stage centre.

OF LAWN AND LACE

The coats for this small sister are of many kinds-piqué, linen, swiss, cloth, mohair, too little trimming than on that of too cashmere, faille, peau de soie, taffeta, messaline, pongee-and they range from the The guimpes to accompany such frocks simple reefer or Russian coat of piqué or of serge to the elaborate confections all embroidery, lace, ribbons and general frivolity. A group of coats sketched for the central cut will illustrate some of the best of the season's ideas, and the Russian box plaited coat, with deeply pointed collar of open work, blind and buttonhole embroidery, or vice versa is particularly effective this little tots, but are hardly so attractive as

The skirts of the blouse and skirt one piece suits are more often plain than tendency of millinery for grown ups. trimmed and may be gathered or plaited in side, or box plaits. The fulled skirts are more readily laundered, but the plaited folded around the crown and knotted at the left front.

Embroidered pique, not open work, is made up in the same way, and often the brims of these rather severe little hats are faced with shirred lawn or overlapping frills of narrow valenciennes. Lingerie hats in this shape but formed entirely of valenciennes frills on ruffled edgings are liked, and there are some pretty shapes in corded mulle and lawn. The variations rung upon the poke bon-

Some of the models have not even a facing,

WIGS AND COLFFURES

GRAY and WHITE HAIR

the dainty, fancy straw being left to frame the face, with a cluster of blossoms tucked in against the hair. Flowers and the softest of ribbons are the accepted trimmings, tiny roses and small field flowers having the preference. Some shirred Napoleonic shapes are shown. Dutch bonnets are picturesque when becoming, and there are, of course, many straight brim and roll bring sailors.

RIPE OLIVES.

A Trick Which People in California Play on Newcomers.

"I have just returned from California." said the traveller, "and for your information, in case you ever wander thither, let me post you on one of the merry little jests which the inhabitants love to ring in on the innocent tenderfoot.

"About the first thing they'll run you up against the California ripe offices. Ever eat them? You can hardly get them here because they won't stand shipment. And they're mighty good.

"Most real olive eaters prefer them to "Most real olive eaters prefer them to the ordinary green pickled olive. The ripe olives are pickled also, you understand, and come out of the brine jet black.

"After you have eaten and approved, they will lead you on by remarking:

"Well, if you like them that way you'll like them better fresh. Just stroll out to the orchard with me and we'll have one.

"Then they lead you out to one of their long lanes of olive trees. I pause to remark that you don't know what olive green and olive brown mean until you've seen those.

olive brown mean until you've seen those colors in that slim, graceful little tree.

"There are the fresh olives all right, hanging among the gray leaves and looking mighty tempting." You pick one, and bite into it.

"Whew! Bitter? I can taste it yet. "Whew! Bitter? I can taste it you.

It's all the quinine and rhutarb and wormwood in the world, combined in a nasty, haunting bitterness that hangs to you until you have eaten two meals. It is an oily bitterness that gets into the corners and you have eaten two meals. It is an oily bitterness that gets into the corners and crannies of your mouth and won't be washed

"When you recover a little they explain that the brine takes out the bitterness, and that's why olives are pickled.

HOW TO EAT A SEED ORANGE. No Spoon Is Used According to the West Indian Method.

"When I was in Jamaica," said a New York man just back from the West Indies, "a native got to talking to me about their oranges.

"I asked him if they raised navels. He said no not to any extent, and that he considered the navel an inferior orange, anyway. I maintained that there is nothing better in the way of a fruit than a good California or Florida navel orange. I said that the seeds and the thick fibre in a seed orange make it disagreeable to eat and spoil the flavor.

"The trouble is,' be answered, 'you do not know how to set a seed orange.'

not know how to eat a seed orange.

"Then he showed me, illustrating with some of his own seed oranges. You peel the orange, taking care to pare just inside the white inner skin. When that is done you have laid bare the outer wall of each of those little sections of which an orange is composed.

"Then you divide these sections one by one and, putting this peeled edge in your mouth, suck. You get the juice and some of the pulp, but none of the fibre and none of the seeds, which hang close to the inner wall of the section.

"That is better than eating it with a spoon for two reasons. In the first place, after you have had the spoon in your mouth once or twice it grows warm and spoils the cool-or twice it grows warm and spoils the coolness of the fruit. In the second place, the spoon method has a tendency to make the juice fly, and that is disagreeable for your reighbors as well as yourself.

"I learned to eat the native orange in the native fashion, and now I think that the seed orange and not the navel is the king of fruits."

Fabrics That Wear Longest. From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The man who wants to be economical coat, with deeply pointed collar of open work, blind and buttonhole embroidery, represents a type of coat considered particularly smart this year.

Open work embroidery on cloth and silk as well as upon linen and beavy cottons enters into the new coats, and there are delectable coats of allover open work embroidery, or swiss or fine lawn and trimmed in valenciennes. Shepherds' checks, with trimmings of plain bright color and soutache, are made up into cunning coats for little tots, but are hardly so attractive as the plain woollens.

Hats for the small girl are as a rule slightly smaller than last year's, following the tendency of millinery for grown ups. The lingerie hats with Tam crown and full brim are more popular and more beautiful than ever; and as a concession to the open work embroidery fad due sees many hats of linen or piqué with fiat Tam crown and flat, plain brim.

The crown is ornamented with open work buttonhole embroidery and scalloped buttonhole edges. Soft silk is folded around the crown and knotted at folded around the crown and knotted the same conditions as its rough surfaced fellow.

"Yet rough finished cloth has the 'call' for popularity, and, singularly enough, lots of men buy it because they think it wears longer, and base their belief on its so called 'protecting nap,' the very thing which shortens its life."

Chicken Stealing Leopard.

From the Labore Tribune,
Mr. Gilfillan, manager of the Golden Streams Syndicate. Rangoon, has been badly mauled by a leopard at Myittsa, Tavoy, Hearing some noise in his fowl house at night he went out to inquire, and on entering it was attacked by a leopard, which badly lacerated his face, head and body. When the last mail left Mr. Gilfillan was in a serious condition.

Invitations, Announcements. At Home, Church, Calling and Reception Cards Menus and Dinner Cards

Designs which are original.

Dempsey & Carroll

22 West 23d Street The Society Stationers

New York

distance above the hem.

Valenciennes lace issued in combina-tion with such embroidery; and, upon the more elaborate dresses, so expensive a more lavish use of inferior lace.

though the price is far less.

propriate trimmings. The bottoms of the are of fine tucking and herringbone, of tucking and lace, of lace insertion set but bertha effects are out, and the flat | babies are like those of last season, though | parts and set together. The line of joining together with beading or without, or of which is, by courtesy, called the waist line fine swiss embroidered by hand in fine comes nearer being a waist line in fact than designs and finished with a lace throat frill it did in earlier seasons, when the French frocks of exaggerated waist length and and, possibly, inset bands of val nci nnes. These last guimpes are of course expenskirt abbreviation held sway; but even sive, but are extremely dainty and modish. now the line comes well below the natural waist

The skirt and blouse are usually set together with inch wide beading or embroidand round yokes of white pique are a feature ery insertion, and when the beading is used of some colored tub frocks which also have upon a simple frock, collar band and wristshapes and descriptions, sailor, square, bands may also be of the beading, and narround, vandyked. embroidered, plain, scal-

OF BLUE AND WHITE LINEN, row ribbon may be run through all the

This idea is illustrated in one of the cuts which represents a dainty little frock of fine white lawn with a band of insertion set in down each side of the front, between groups of fine hand tucks, and beading used after the fashion already described.

Another frock with beading waist band has short puff sleeves finished with beading, and a bertha with embroidered scalloped edge and open work embroidery design It is worn over a guimpe, and sleeves of finest tucked lawn edged with valenciennes at throat and wrists, and a frill of narrow valenciennes edges also the scalloped border of the bertha.

The bertl a with scalloped edge and open work or blind embroidery is very popular, especially with the frock of linen or other rather heavy material, and deep collars of similar construction are also much liked. Indeed, embroidery is as much a feature retained. The smock may have a box of children's clothes as of the clothes for little frocks are made of lovely swiss or grown-ups, and the popular varieties for the little girl who has re-ched the Russian | embroidery to match trime the bertha and or blouse and skirt frock age are not so sleeves of the waist. ..

to the sculloped edge of the row above so that the bertha when finished flares enough to lie out smoothly over the Some of the circular flouncings now made In batiste and Swiss embroideries are suitable for berthas and more easily shaped than the straight flouncings. There are, too, appliqué embroidery motifs forming deep so illops in fine design, and these are set on the edge of a bertha of plain material so as to form a continuous line. The material is out away underneath the embroidery. and the latter gives an effective scallor

Sometimes a little embroidery medallion is set into the material in the centre of each so illop, or a large white dot is embroidered there, but overelaboration must be guarded against, and it is better to err on the side of

With play frocks of linen, gingham, &c., plain guimpe of white pique is often used.

plain cuffs of the pique. Collars of all loped, inset and banded, are in order, and the fashion of trimming white tub frocks with material of contrasting color season because of the beauty of thecolormodels are more practicable for linen and ings in the wash stuffs.

much, if any mistake is made.

border effect.

OF DOTTED AND PLAIN PIQU other heavy material

When the stuff is not too heavy a group of tucks or inset line of insertion makes a pretty skirt finish, but any complicated or ornate trimming is out of place on the short skirts. The skirts of some charming batiste embroidery flouncing and narrower